

The 1999 season is all over and the 2000 season start is still a couple of months away. You're already bored with football, football, football, so what do you do? How about a little Surfing? I logged on to <http://yahoo.co.uk>, recently, typed in Formula One to the Search bar and here are a few of the bits I was able to find.

Formula One. The quick guide to flag waving:

By the marshals:

Watch out! A car of the organisation, an ambulance, a fire-car or a slow driving participant on the track.

A faster driver is behind you. When this flag is being flourished: Let the faster driver pass you!

Watch out! Danger! Slow down! It is prohibited to overtake. When this flag is being flourished: BIG DANGER! Do not overtake! Be prepared to stop immediately!

The earlier indicated warning for danger has been withdrawn. Also: start of the warming-up lap or start of the training.

By the marshals, the referee or his assistant:

Watch out! Slippery track (e.g. sand, oil or water on the track).

Exclusively by the referee or his assistant:

All cars must stop racing. Drive slowly and carefully to the pits or to the start/finish line.

With this flag a number of a driver is shown. The driver mentioned has to stop at his pitbox during next lap. Often: disqualification.

With this flag a number of a driver is shown. Your car has a technical defect, which is dangerous for other drivers. Stop at your pitbox immediately.

Last warning for the driver whose number is shown (unfair driving).

Finishflag. End of the race or training
