

THE LIGHTER SIDE

A man is driving his car quite erratically, and the Police stop him. The officer says that he will have to be breathalysed. At which point he pulls out a card saying that he suffers from bad asthma so can't do that. The officer then says that he will have to go down to the station and give a blood sample. At which point the man brings out a card saying that he is a haemophiliac so can't give blood. At this the officer says that he will have to have a urine sample. At which the man brings out a card which says, 'This man is a Norwich supporter....' dont take the ps

London Prices
Two yokels are walking along Kensington High Street when they see a sign:
Suits £20.00 Trousers £10.00 Shirts £5.00
One said to the other one "Look at that - we could buy a lot of that gear and when we get back home we could make a fortune"
They go in and order, 50 suits, 50 Trousers & 100 shirts
The owner of the shop says "Don't live round here do you?"
One yokel says "How did you know that?";
The owners says, "This is a dry cleaners"

Question: Why does the River Mersey run through Liverpool?
Answer: Because if it walked it would be mugged.
Question: What's the difference between an american football player and a puddle?
Answer: A puddle has more depth

You know, I went to London last week and somebody actually complimented me on my driving. They left a little note on the windscreen, it said 'Parking Fine.' So that was nice.

A source inside Camelot, the lottery people, has revealed that a man from Birmingham was a recent winner in the nation's favourite weekly gamble. The lucky chap was delighted to announce that he had spent his winnings on a new player for his beloved Aston Villa "If my three numbers come up and win me a tenner again," he added, "I'll gladly buy them another!"

This contribution claims to be an exact recount of US National Public Radio (NPR) interview between a female broadcaster, and US Army General Reinwald who was about to sponsor a Boy scout Troop visiting his military installation. NPR is noted for their ultra liberal feelings and their anti-gun efforts for the past forty years.

FEMALE INTERVIEWER: "So, General Reinwald, what things are you going to teach these young boys when they visit your base?"

GENERAL REINWALD: "We're going to teach them climbing, canoeing, archery, and shooting."

FEMALE INTERVIEWER: "Shooting! That's a bit irresponsible, isn't it?"

GENERAL REINWALD: "I don't see why, they'll be properly supervised on the rifle range."

FEMALE INTERVIEWER: "Don't you admit that this is a terribly dangerous activity to be teaching children?"

GENERAL REINWALD: "I don't see how,we will be teaching them proper rifle range discipline before they even touch a firearm."

FEMALE INTERVIEWER: "But you're equipping them to become violent killers."

GENERAL REINWALD:
 "Well, you're equipped to be a prostitute, but you're not one, are you?"

The radio apparently went silent and the interview ended.

Two boys are playing football in the park when one of them is attacked by a rottweiler. Thinking quickly, his friend rips a plank of wood from a fence, forces it into the dog's collar and twists it, breaking the dog's neck.
All the while, a newspaper reporter who was taking a stroll through the park is watching. He rushes over, introduces himself and takes out his pad and pencil to start his story for the next edition. He writes, "Manchester City fan saves friend from vicious animal." The boy interrupts: "But I'm not a City fan." The reporter starts again: "Manchester United fan saves friend from horrific attack." The boy interrupts again: "I'm not a United fan either." The reporter asks: "Who do you support, then?" "Liverpool," replies the boy. So the reporter starts again: "Scouse bd kills family pet"
