WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

I wonder how many of you recognised Kevin Lynch who used to be in the commercial section here in Riyadh. Kevin set out to raise cash for Raleigh International by telling people they had only to walk 75 yards. Only after they had signed up, did he tell them that the walk was vertical - down the side of Ghana's tallest building, which is aptly named Trust Towers.

Kevin's squad of totally petrified amateurs completed the abseil challenge and raised over £1000 for the cause. Raleigh International is the leading youth development charity which inspires young people from all backgrounds and nationalities to discover their full potential by working together on challenging adventure projects.

And Finally

Paul Gent spotted this snippet in the local Green-Un

A customer in an 'unnamed' international hamburger chain lost his appetite when he discovered the restaurant's toilet seats were missing. When he asked staff about the missing seats an employee took them out of the dishwasher where they had been cleaned together with the trays and kitchen utensils. The employee then tried to reassure the customer that the freshly washed toilet seats would be warm and pleasant to sit on. A senior representative of the restaurant chain said the incident was not standard company procedure.
